

Accentuate the Positive

Source: Ibbotson Associates/Morningstar. Past performance is no guarantee of future results.

View from the Observation Deck

1. Today's blog post is yet another attempt at putting equity investing in its proper light. We still believe that U.S. equities represent one of the best avenues for wealth-building potential over time.
2. From 1926 through 2017, the S&P 500 Index generated a positive total return in 68 of the 92 calendar years, or 73.91% of the time, according to Ibbotson Associates/Morningstar. The index posted a 10.16% average annual total return over that period.
3. Year-to-date through 8/28/18, the S&P 500 Index posted a total return of 9.75%. That equates to annualized return of 15.06%, according to Bloomberg.
4. Investors should take some solace in the fact that 17 of the 24 calendar years, or 70.83%, in which the S&P 500 generated a negative total return occurred prior to 1975, according to data from Ibbotson Associates/Morningstar.
5. We believe that corporate earnings determine the direction of stock prices over time.
6. Bloomberg consensus earnings growth rate estimates for the S&P 500 Index for 2018, 2019 and 2020 were 23.58%, 11.47% and 10.05%, respectively, as of 8/24/18.

This chart is for illustrative purposes only and not indicative of any actual investment. There can be no assurance that any of the projections cited will occur. The illustration excludes the effects of taxes and brokerage commissions or other expenses incurred when investing. Investors cannot invest directly in an index. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. The S&P 500 is a capitalization-weighted index comprised of 500 stocks (currently 505) used to measure large-cap U.S. stock market performance.

The information presented is not intended to constitute an investment recommendation for, or advice to, any specific person. By providing this information, First Trust is not undertaking to give advice in any fiduciary capacity within the meaning of ERISA and the Internal Revenue Code. First Trust has no knowledge of and has not been provided any information regarding any investor. Financial advisors must determine whether particular investments are appropriate for their clients. First Trust believes the financial advisor is a fiduciary, is capable of evaluating investment risks independently and is responsible for exercising independent judgment with respect to its retirement plan clients.