View from the Observation Deck

1. We chose 10/9/07 as our start date because it marked the last day of the prior bull market in stocks (10/9/02-10/9/07), as measured by the S&P 500 Index.
2. The backstory to the period featured in the chart (10/9/07-2/7/20) involves a seismic shift in retail investor sentiment in favor of fixed-income opportunities over equities, as measured by mutual fund flows.
3. From 12/31/07-12/31/19, retail investors funneled a net $1.69 trillion into bond mutual funds, while liquidating a net $1.45 trillion from equity mutual funds, according to data from the Investment Company Institute.
4. In addition to posting the performance figures for some of the major bond index categories, we also show what each index yielded at the end of the period to help investors set realistic performance expectations moving forward.
5. For the period featured in the chart, the yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note declined from 4.65% to 1.58%, or 307 basis points, according to data from Bloomberg. A good climate for bonds.
6. With respect to the returns posted by the two foreign categories, investors need to factor in that the U.S. dollar appreciated 25.66% in the period, as measured by the U.S. Dollar Index (DXY), according to Bloomberg.
7. Overall, bond investors were rewarded during the period featured in the chart. For comparative purposes, from 1926-2019, U.S. long-term government bonds posted an average annual total return of 5.56%, according to Morningstar/Ibbotson Associates.
